If you haven't already, you should absolutely read our Game 5 preview. There's a lot at stake in the final game of the 2018 Stanley Cup Final. The Canadiens won Game 5 in Montreal and have built a 3-2 lead in the series. The Bruins will not want to go down 3-2 in the final game. In order for the Bruins to win, they'll have to prove that they can win Game 6. And can the Bruins take Game 6? Here's what you need to know for the Game 6 matchup. The Bruins are in a good spot If the Bruins lose Game 6 in Montreal, the series could go to a Game 7. The Bruins would then have to travel to Montreal to face the Canadiens in a Game 7. Playing the game at a neutral site in Boston makes things much easier on the Bruins. They don't have to travel all the way to Montreal on short notice. The Canadiens have already played two games at home. A Game 7 in Montreal may be difficult for the Canadiens. So, if the Bruins win Game 6 in Boston, it could be a great thing for the Bruins.
